A new online tool could help us save hundreds on our cell-phone bills. The Citizens Utility Board just launched cubcellphonesaver.com. It's a program on the Internet that helps us avoid unnecessary cell-phone charges. The tool analyzes our individual wireless bills, identifies the cheapest calling plans, gives out customized saving tips, and spots billing errors. CUB directors say it's just another way to help us protect our bottom lines. A | A | A

"i think with the economy struggling and energy prices rising people are looking for ways to save," said David Kolata, CUB executive director.

During the initial testing phase the CUB cellphone saver showed consumers how to cut their bills by an average of 260-dollars a year.
